In the heart of Jadame, the Factory rises as a beacon of progress amidst the desolation. Born from the exodus of Halflings and refugees fleeing the Kreegan invasion of Eeofol, these innovators have forged a new future in Burton, igniting a wave of Factory towns across Terra Nova.

Here, mercenaries and artificers unite, commanding tamed exotic beasts and mechanical marvels in the Wasteland. Armed with guns and flamethrowers, they stand ready to defend their realm. The Factory buzzes with anticipation, eager for bold adventurers to step forth.

Will you embrace the challenge and harness the technological might of the Factory to etch your legend into the annals of history?

In this expansion for Heroes of Might and Magic III: The Board Game, you will discover a host of new features, including Quests, a new faction, a new scenario, a few optional rules for the Core Game, as well as a dedicated campaign.

NEW ELEMENTS

Quests

The Factory expansion introduces “Quests cards” 1, which provide players with additional objectives to complete during the game. Shuffle the Quest deck and place it face down near the game board. Then, draw the top card and place it face up to create the discard pile.

Quest

1. Name
2. Flavour text
3. Requirement
4. Reward

Structure of a Quest Card

Each Quest card consists of two sections: Requirement and Reward. There are two main types of Quests which differ significantly in the Requirement section:

- Non-Counter Quests – These require a specific action to be performed (such as discarding cards or using abilities) or have a condition that must be met at a certain point in the game. The player may choose when to complete the Quest if the condition is met multiple times.

- Counter Quests – These require accumulating a certain number of ! tokens before they can be completed. When a player meets the condition to gain !, they place a black cube on their Quest card. A Counter Quest can be completed at any time once it has at least the required number of ! tokens.

Once Quest is completed, the player immediately resolves the Reward effect and the card is removed from the game.

Acquiring and Managing Quests

When a player gains a Quest, they place it face up next to their Hero or Town board. A player may only have one active Quest at a time. If a player gains a new Quest while already having an active one, they must discard the current Quest before accepting the new one.

Quests can be obtained from Seer's Hut locations, allowing a player to Search(2) Quests. Seer's Hut functions similarly to a Star Axis, meaning each player may use it only once. Quests can also be acquired through new Astrologer effects and Event cards. Just like other decks, Search(X) allows a player to take the top card from the discard pile.

By incorporating Quests into their strategy, players can gain powerful rewards that may turn the tide of the game.

Map Locations

In Factory Expansion, you will find more tiles with new locations to discover. For the complete list of the locations, go to All Map Locations.

Mark Tokens

Mark tokens are indicators placed on enemy units and are applied by units or abilities, enhancing strategic options during gameplay.

These tokens remain in play for the duration of the Combat and signify that the marked units are being targeted. The specific effects of Mark tokens are detailed on the relevant cards, explaining how they influence the marked units. Each unit can only have one Mark token applied to it.
